“Like my brain is, the cogs are spinning, and that’s making the whole machine hot": Live scoring and interpretation of a Thurston Cradock Test of Shame (TCTS) protocol

A 3-hour webinar on January 20, 2027 from 10:00am-1:00pm MST

Presented by Julie Cradock O’Leary, Ph.D. and Jason Turret, Psy.D.

Training overview

This webinar will demonstrate how to score and interpret a TCTS protocol using a multimethod clinical case. Assessor Jason Turret will briefly present the case. Then, TCTS co-author Julie Cradock O’Leary will score and interpret the case live, taking questions from participants during the process. A case conceptualization will follow, including how TCTS findings fit with other test data. The use of the TCTS in a clinical intervention will also be discussed.

Case Spotlight

A male in his early 30s was referred for a collaborative/therapeutic assessment by his therapist because progress had stalled. The client’s assessment questions focused on difficulties being in touch with his thoughts and feelings, exploring his high self-expectations, and better understanding his anxiety. Other measures used include the WAIS-5, MMPI-3, NEO-PI-3, Crisi Wartegg System and the Rosenzweig Picture-Frustration Study.

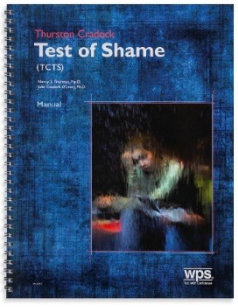

Learning objectives

At the end of this webinar, participants will be able to:

- Describe how to score and interpret a TCTS protocol
- Explain how TCTS Summary Form scores are clarified by reviewing story content
- Assess how TCTS findings fit with other test data
- Explain how to use the TCTS cards in a clinical intervention
